FIND BURIED SKELETON SEATED ON OLD SADDLE

GRUESOME DISCOVERY IS MADE BY RANCHER LEVELING GROUND AT FALLON

Bert Hardy made a gruesome discovery this week while working with his team scraping and leveling land on his ranch about three miles south of Fallon, says the Eagle. He scraped up part of a skeleton, and while this is not uncommon, the conditions surrounding the find in this particular case attracted unusual attention.

Further disclosures showed that the legs were astride of a saddle, the leather of which was still partly intact, though the tree had decayed. The bones and legs were sticking in the shoes, one on each side of the saddle. The shoes were in a fair state of preservation, the leather strings still being tied in a bow knot. W. D. Cook, a neighbor, who was present, said the outline of the fabric of the socks was intact and that particles of the clothing indicated that the cloth had a bluish tinge. The teeth were in a good state of preservation, and particles of the hair showed it to be brown. There was no indication of the bones of a horse or bridge or bit, but that the body was buried astride of the saddle. Hardy has no doubt. The discovery was made on a piece of high ground that Hardy did considerable scraping on last year. The whys and wherefores will probably never be known.

CASH BOY GETTING INTO GOOD GROUND

E. H. Mead of Tonopah is in the city for the purpose of conferring with A. S. Ross, president of the Cash Boy company, says the Salt Lake Tribune. This company, states Mead, has the shaft now at about the 750-foot level and conditions are such that ore is expected between the 800 and 900 levels. Instead of at the 1000 level as originally outlined by the management. The shaft at the present time is showing some values, and as it is penetrating the capping at present, everything leads to the conclusion that when the right spot is gained ore will be opened.

Tonopah, says Mead, is in the best condition of its history. Production is being crowded at a record pace and new developments are such that the camp is assured of a long and brilliant future of usefulness. Goldfield also, he added, was in splendid condition and will make some fine history for Nevada throughout 1913.

A BIG MILL IS PLANNED

The mining company that intends to install a 100-stamp mill at Aurora, is already figuring on transportation facilities, which in this case is a big item. The plants is estimated to weigh 200 tons and naturally the freight of this enormous mill equipment is being figured down to the last cent. Present reports indicate that the machinery will be shipped to Aurora via Minden, this being the natural route to the camp, and is, consequently, the cheapest. With the promised new life at Masonic and the big undertaking at Aurora, something like old times is expected this summer.—Record Courier.

THE WRONG END

The other evening two Bulgarians working for the reclamation service at Lahontan and living in a shack undertook a quiet jag. Quiet discussion led to argument and argument to blows. One of them took down a shotgun with the evident intention of using it. The other earnestly and enthusiastically applied the back of his hand to the other's head till he saw stars, where anybody else would have seen his finish. Dr. Williamson was about 24 hours patching up the one on the wrong side of the handaxe.

AMUSEMENTS

Butler Theater

At the Butler theater tonight will be shown four reels of splendid pictures, as follows: "A Little Child Shall Lead Them," a Selig drama; "Broncho Billy's Gun Play," an Esanay western dramatic story featuring G. M. Anderson, and "Two Sets of Furs," and "The Coke Industry." Through mistaken identity, a young fellow becomes acquainted with a very charming young lady, whom he afterwards marries. His sister wears a set of furs exactly like the other girl's. The two sets of furs puzzle him. His mistake gets him into a little trouble at first, but everything ends happily. "The Coke Industry" is an industrial subject that takes us into a region of fiery furnaces that form a very important phase of manufacture throughout the world. This exhibition at the Butler will give variety, both the entertaining and the instructive. Maurice Costello, Lillian Walker and Leah Baird appear in "Two Sets of Furs."

Tomorrow, "The Little Minister," in three reels.

Father Yorke's Lecture

The average priest thinks he has his hands full when he is called to administer the spiritual affairs of a flock numbering between 2000 and 3000 souls, but when a gentleman of the cloth voluntarily assumes to add to this burden the arduous duty of editing a live newspaper and conducting half a dozen free lyceums throughout the length and breadth of San Francisco, he must be given credit for being an indefatigable worker.

Such a man is Father Yorke. None of the obligations are slighted in the least. He hires no substitutes, for his purse would not admit of the tax. He is editor, pastor, spiritual and temporal adviser to his entire congregation and his services are in constant demand by the pastors of other parishes for the purpose of helping their congregations through literary courses to a better understanding of matters of the day. It is a notorious fact that Father Yorke never receives a penny for his services in the interest of the church or the public at large for he cheerfully donates his services to the cause of charity or advancement.

As an orator he is witty, magnetic and convincing. He is never at a loss and is as ready with his tongue as he is with the caustic pen that he wields with masterly grace that shows what a privation was suffered by the press when the reverend gentleman accepted ordination rather than to embark in the stormy sea of journalism.

Father Yorke will appear at the Nevada theater, Tonopah, next Tuesday evening, April 1.

PRISONERS ARE STILL IN

Nothing more is being heard about the great diabolical plot of a few weeks ago when all of the convicts at the Carson pen were to have been turned loose upon this city, which they were to have ravaged from end to end. The sensational aftermath which were to have been disclosed seem also to have been forgotten.—Carson Appeal.
